A Couple Makes Their Home within an Abandoned Building that Was Part of Her Printing Business

When the building was built, it was a printing plant. But for the couple who bought it, it's a home. The building was built in 1920 and was used as a printing plant until the late 1980s. The couple bought the building in 2010 and spent the next several years renovating it. The building is now a beautiful home with a modern feel. The couple has lived in the building for several years and love it. The building is a great example of how an old building can be transformed into a modern home.
